

Transcription Sequence

James Hillon

How you can reduce your premium

There are a lot of factors that go into calculating a premium, and one factor our customers can most easily change is the policy excess. So a higher excess would reduce their premium. You need to be mindful that the excess is the amount that you need to pay in the event of a claim, so make sure it is an amount that you think you could afford if the worst should happen. Aside from that, on the motor insurance side, reducing the amount of mileage that you drive is a good way of reducing your premium. On the home insurance side, it's making sure that your cover is right and you're not overpaying for too much cover.